Independent FPD - Still the Only Choice Fancy purchasing an Isuzu Fiance thanks to a new hire? That's not all - we've just made our JCBs, Scubas and Foxes virtually maintenance-free! That's right, more cost-effective service, with a total of 9 tractors to choose from with just one model remaining: the Independent. With the change to the Independent becoming effective immediately, there's never been a better time to purchase an Independent. You will be shocked to learn that the Independent is now cheaper than previous models - the Black is now priced at £14,995.00 and the new Grey is £15,295.00. As in previous years, the independent continues to be an excellent buy at £16,495.00 for the Red - the lowest priced independent in the history of the model. The Independent is the most cost effective way to buy, offering all independent models for no more than the cost of a Rayleigh cab and sleeper. Of course, it's not just those prices that are incredible. As we've launched our new range of sister brands, there's never been a better time to own an Independent, since every independent model is now our cheapest ever from inception. The recent news regarding Puma arriving in the market has had one of the most significant impacts on the independent market, with the recent introduction of the Compact turning the price of the Puma up by at least a hundred pounds. While the Compact is indeed cheaper than the independent, the current price of £3,995.00 makes it the most expensive option we've ever sold! And don't forget - if you ever want to upgrade to any new model in the near future, the Compact is an absolute steal of a deal at just £4,099.00, making it the cheapest to be added to, and, in the case of the new red model, one of the cheapest to be bought. It's fantastic to be able to offer the best value for money around, and the Independent is still the only FPD with a major investment in our new range of sister brands. So if you're on the lookout for an incredible value investment, one that allows you to not just buy an independent, but adds another pair of legs to support it, why not check out the new Independent and take delivery of

What's New In Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.1.0)?

The UK's culture secretary, Ed Vaizey, has announced a ban on members of the National Trust using heavy vehicles and motorbikes to reach their properties. The move would see a five-year jail sentence imposed for allowing, or causing the commission of, an offence under the Road Traffic Act 1991. Vaizey explained in a statement that the move was partly a response to the publicity surrounding an incident at the National Trust's restored Cliveden House on the Thames in May last year. Cliveden House was the home of Nancy Astor, the Labour MP and socialite, until the Second World War when she returned to her family home of Cliveden in Buckinghamshire. She was the founder of the National Trust. In December 2012 the Trust was called to demolish a part of the heavily ruined front of the house because of concerns about its historic and physical integrity, following severe damage caused by fire. It was planning to build a new two-storey extension to the house. The family made headlines when they applied for planning permission to install a 30m-long moped rail track through the house, to allow access for a motorbike that would take less than 15 minutes to ride. In the days that followed the announcement in January, the Royal Geographical Society, which helped raise funds for the project, called for a judicial review into the decision, saying the track contravened building regulations. The trust has said it does not yet have plans for the motorbike. The National Trust had requested that the court conduct the judicial review on the basis that the matter was raised during a planning application for the restoration and new extension of the house. The trust said in a statement: "National Trust members are not permitted to drive motor vehicles on any land owned by the Trust, for any reason. "From March this year, the Trust's policy will be to issue such members with a warning when they arrive at a property they are visiting by car or van. Following this, they will be asked to leave their motor vehicles outside the site. "There are vast numbers of National Trust properties. We have 10,000 miles of path and 6,000 miles of equestrian trails - some of which are used by motor vehicles and motorcycles. "A repeat offence in this respect would result in imprisonment." The trust said it would inform the royal household of
